PHOTO COMPETITION

Are you a teenager who likes to take photographs? If you are, enter the Broadway Gallery Photography Competition. You may win a prize!

Every year, our gallery in New York has a competition for teenagers from around the world. Three famous photographers decide which photo is the best. The winner receives $1000 and a camera. All the photos that the participants send us will be in the exhibition at the gallery.

If you want to participate in the competition, you should:

- choose two of your best photos. Your photos can be of people or of places.
  They can be in black and white or in color.
- write a short description of each photo and explain why you chose it.
- · write your name, age and home address.

Send everything by email, no later than February 3, 2013.

For more information, go to our Internet website:www.broadwaygallery.com

A WEEK WITHOUT TV

by Emily Sloan

An American organization called Screen* Free wants to educate people to watch less TV. Rachel Simons, a volunteer at the organization, says, "We think people should find other ways to spend their time. So, one of the things we do is to ask Americans to turn off their TV for a week." Screen Free also tells people to use their computers and smartphones less.

Many people agree with Screen Free. Parents think that their children should not spend so much time playing computer games or watching TV programs. They believe that kids should go outdoors and play with friends. Teachers say that kids who watch too much TV, especially at night, have problems at school. Doctors warn about health dangers of watching too much TV. They explain that children eat a lot of junk food when they sit in front of the TV or the computer screen. As a result, many of them are overweight.

However, owners of TV stations disagree with the ideas of Screen Free. They say that there are many good TV programs and that people can learn a lot from them. They also claim that parents should pay attention to what their kids watch on TV.

"One thing is sure," says Rachel. "It is not enough to turn off screens for just one week. People should try to do it longer."
